last hangout was a poolroom in Bath-gate avenue, the Bronx, where he occasionally played stuss when he could procure any money from his mother or of gangsters and many of them knew Schwartz slightly and have been aselsting in the search for him since last Friday, when they learned of his dis-appearance and the fact that the police desired to had him. This sort of assistance has so far been utterly futile.

MOTHER OF SCHWARTZ LEAVES HOME OF SISTER.

Mrs. Schwarts, mother of the hunted Nathan, had left the home of her sister. Mrs. Orrenstein, No. 593 Cleveland street, East New York, to-lay, and her aldest daughter, Mrs. Frances Alexander, was packing up to make her departure when an Evening World reporter got there.

Mrs. Alexander said only the police would know the various addresses to which the members of the family were scattering and that it was upon the advice of detectives that they were seeking seclusion.

Yesterday," said the young women. "Capt. Price of the Bronx Detective Bureau got from us a stenographer's report of everything we know about the actions of my brother while w were living at No. 3970 Third avenue, next door to the house in which that little girl was killed.
